Manchmal gibt es mehr als eine richtige Lösung.

- a. Ms Banks Liz, could you do the shopping for me today? It won't take long, we just need a few things for the weekend.
- b. Liz OK, Mum, but I haven't got time, I must study for a maths test.
- c. Ms Banks That's all right, we only need milk, let's say two bottles.
- d. Liz Didn't Helen want to visit us for the weekend? She always drinks milk.
- e. Ms Banks Of course, you are right, I completely forgot about that. Let's say four bottles, then. We also need meat for the casserole on Sunday; not too though, two pounds will be enough, we have vegetables and potatoes to go with it.
- f. Liz Helen doesn't eat meat, Mum. So perhaps we should also buy tomatoes for a salad?
- g. Ms Banks Good idea! And then we need oranges for dessert, but not too
- h. Liz Only? You know that Dad always eats oranges. Last week he didn't leave a single one for us!
- i. Ms Banks Well, you're right. Take as as you want then. And then we mustn't forget to buy bread, of course. There isn't left. Oh, yes, and we also need some cheese.
- j. Liz So that's four bottles of milk, two pounds of meat, tomatoes, oranges, bread and cheese. Just things, you said. By the way, Mum, can I go out with Dennis and Sarah tonight?
- Ms Banks* Didn't you say you have to study for a test?
- Liz* Oh Mum, come on!
